

Effective Research-Based Program to Build Students' Social Studies Knowledge and Text Comprehension

What is PACT?

- ◆ Promoting Adolescents' Comprehension of Text (PACT) is a program that was designed to supplement existing American history courses and curriculum with evidence-based reading and literacy practices.
- ◆ PACT aims to improve literacy strategies in the context of social studies instruction, addressing three American history units (Colonial America, Road to Revolution, and Revolutionary War).
- ◆ PACT has been found to be effective with diverse learners, including English learners and students with and without disabilities and reading difficulties.
- ◆ In a number of prior federally-funded research studies, PACT shows prior evidence of effectiveness on social studies, reading, and literacy outcomes.¹

Who can participate in PACT-Local (PACT-L)?

- ◆ Districts that have schools teaching units related to Colonial America, Road to Revolution, and Revolutionary War in 6th-9th grade can participate in PACT-L.

Benefits of Participation

The PACT-Local program

- ◆ provides professional development,
- ◆ builds local capacity by training local coaches to support participating teachers,
- ◆ provides PACT program materials and professional development activities at no cost, and
- ◆ compensates educators for supporting data collection.

"Students were able to understand content-related vocabulary within the context of primary source readings at a new level. As a result, their comprehension of the text and overall engagement in the learning increased."

– 2021 Participating Educator

Email the PACT-L recruitment team at pactlrecruitment@air.org to learn more about participating in this exciting opportunity, or contact one of our team members directly!

Isabelle D'Souza

Dr. Lauren Artzi

Dr. Matthew Burns

Dr. Katie Drummond

PACT-L Recruitment Coordinator

PACT –L Principal Investigator

PACT –L Principal Investigator

PACT-L Principal Investigator

idsouza@air.org

lartzi@air.org

burnsm1@coe.ufl.edu

kdrummo@wested.org